

ECB Guidance on Codes of Conduct

The ECB provides codes of conduct for all cricket participants – the Code of Conduct for Members and Guests; and the Code of Conduct for Coaches. These codes of conduct provide participants with details of acceptable and unacceptable behaviour, and the expectations of others in relation to good operational practices. The codes of conduct provides clubs, leagues and other bodies with reference points for managing participants and as such assist in identifying unacceptable practice within the game. Breaches of these codes of conduct can be dealt with at a local, regional or national level as appropriate in each individual circumstance.
